The Ranch

The Monkey Ranch being located in the Southern Panhandle of Western Nebraska. This part of Nebraska is dominated by agriculture either by farming and raising crops to feed livestock or the grazing of all types of livestock. Currently The Monkey Ranch is being utilized as a Buffalo grazing operation. The shorter hard grasses are ideal for the Buffalo operation. The part of the Ranch lying East of Highway 71 has been leased to cattle ranchers for the past several years. There is a large underpass under the highway which will allow cattle or vehicles to move from one side to the other

The current owners through years of experience in handling Buffalo have designed their corrals and pastures to work effectively in their operation. Their experience has also played a role in the handling of the Buffalo to insure that the disposition of these animals will remain calm and easy to handle. The chute and working corrals are a state of the art operation which provides safety to the animals as well as, the operators.

It is very evident that any facility that can handle Buffalo can handle cattle as well. Any Buffalo that are currently on the Ranch can be moved to another property that the owners own or in the event that the new owners are interested in purchasing these, the owners would consider selling them to the new owners.
